MUNSON BOY ON CASUALTY LIST

The latest name to appear on the casualty list is that of Frank Sixby who is officially reported suffering from a bullet wound in the back.
Mrs. L. Hart of Warden, wife of the wounded hero, received a bullet on Friday but no details were given as to his condition. He was wounded during the latter part of September and has been removed to the Army hospital.

Pte. Sixby was among the first of the volunteers to offer his services leaving Munson in August, 1914, his boy have done, and has been credited by receiving a distinguished conduct medal for bravery on the field. His friends hope his wounds

are not serious.

He has made a name for himself while at the front, as several other Munson boys have done, and has been credited by receiving a distinguished

conduct medal for bravery on the field. His friends hope his wounds
are not serious.

Mr. Jas. Russell occupied the chair and opened the concert with an appropriate address. The program consisted of songs by Miss Colvin, Mr. Rogers and Mr. Harvey, instrumental selections by the Drum-heller orchestra, Miss Lillian Murdoch and Miss Ward, recitation by Miss Brown and an interesting talk from Father Bolin, Miss Pinkham of Calmar. Society gave an extremely interesting and instructive address on Red Cross work which was enthusiastically received by the audience. Few words failed to move by the quiet carpet of one who had done much himself to help the Empire.

We feel sure there will be a larger interest aroused in Red Cross work here from this time forward. A very heavy vote of thanks was moved by Mr. Rogers in a few well selected remarks, was seconded by Dr. Gibson and heartily responded to by all present. The concert closed with the singing of the National Anthem. The dance which followed was enjoyed by a large number. The music was furnished by the Drumheller Orchestra and supper was served by the Red Cross Ladies. The gross receipts of the evening amounted to $80.75.

Fire Prevention In Schools

Early Attention of Teachers Required to Safeguard Pupils

The protection of pupils from fire and panic is the first duty of those in charge of schools, and should be re-opening for the autumn term and the institution of fire drills should be the first order of business. The first day of school is not too early for this purpose. Many schools will be compelled to be accustomed to their surroundings, and in case of fire or other disastrous results, might follow.

In an average city, during the first school term, two fires occurred, fortunately during the absence of the pupils, but the damage was considerable. The occurrence of fires so early in the year clearly demonstrates the necessity of giving first attention to this form of security.

The principal and teachers should also familiarize themselves with the school fire hazards, any day and under any conditions for immediate attention.

Accumulations of papers, discarded furniture and school supplies are stored in basements and attics, and necessary caution should be exercised to prevent fire danger from spontaneous combustion. Books, shavings or papers, when through attack, should be carefully inspected for any cracks or defects from which sparks could easily be given off.

The care of waste paper is important. All waste paper should be used in the contests burned as soon as the basements are full; no paper should be accumulated.

The burning should be done in a safe place, away from frame or wooden structures, and should be carried out by either the teacher personally or, by some reliable senior pupil.

The heating of the stove or furnace, should be carefully examined and placed in fire-safe condition.

Ashes should be kept in metal containers, and waste paper should be used in the contests burned as soon as the basements are full; no paper should be accumulated.

The heating of the stove or furnace, should be carefully examined and placed in fire-safe condition.

In the larger schools where a janitor is employed it should be a part of his duty to inspect the condition of the school premises, from basement to attic. This should be important, not simply a matter of convenience.

The position of janitor, caretaker of school is important. The custody of valuable property and the protection of many lives are in his hands. The first consideration for qualification for this position is the low salary at which a man may be engaged. The janitor should be made one of ample salary and a reliable, qualified occupant employed.

It is the duty of the school board to insist upon this.

There has been a material increase in the number of school children during the past few years. In 1913 there were 35 school fire losses, in 1914 there were 40, and in 1915 there were only 11. It is hoped that these show that, out of the greater number exercised by those responsible, school fires have been entirely eliminated.

About Heligoland

Germany's Naval Base a Haven of Refuge for Pursued War Vessels

In 1890 Heligoland was formally ceded to Germany in return for concessions made to Britain in East Africa. This small island in the North Sea, which first came into the hands of the British in 1807 and made a signal British triumph, it remained the property of the powerful House of Great Britain and then was ceded to the German in 1890, since which time it has been a German naval base and is now the base for the German navy.

Heligoland, situated 28 miles northwest of the mouth of the Elbe, consists of a steep, rocky island, with a strip of sand and its sand foot. The laws are the old Frisian, the German language the native tongue, but German is little spoken. The fishers are Frisian, a tall and hardy race, hardy, simple, and primitive, habits and holding land-labor in common, and the descendants of immigrants from Hamburg and other places on the mainland, or their descendants. They have had to be men of great use to the German navy during the present war, and their sons have been in pursuit. According to tradition, Heligoland is the largest great tract of country having been swallowed up by the sea between A.D. 700 and 1000. During the last 26 years demarcating agencies have been at work, which have added a fourth island by one-fourth. Heligoland was anciently sacred to the goddess Hrana, whose divinity was first preached there by St. Willibald in the 7th century.

A Ricketsy Affair

In a sense there is no Austria. There is only Austria language. The Austro-Hungarian empire is a collection of mutually hostile and jealous races, who, though they hate each other, being held together by force and fear. If it were allowed to disintegrate, it would be the mere play of its centrifugal forces. The marriage of Austria and Hungary is a political alliance.

"It has been compelled by outer forces. The break-up of such an empire, however, as the result of it, would be release."—Montreal Star.

When Germany Will Be Conquered

A Choice Collection of German Leaders Are Destroyed

Germany will be conquered, when Germany is converted, when it is a spirit, not a system of government, and a spirit can never be changed by conquest, only by conversion, only by a revolution within. There are evident signs that this revolution is now in progress. The German people are losing their hold upon their freedom; that the German people are losing their hold upon their crown; that the German people are losing their hold upon their God.

This evidence is seen in such publications as "The Accuse," "Because I," and "The German," the great organ of the Socialistic protest against the conduct of the war, in which the Socialists of the world are growing decadent in their quarters for peace; in riots which are now a daily occurrence, as reported in the apparent readiness of the government of Belgium and allow its right to exist; in the apologetic defenses of the German leaders, and in their appeals to the people to maintain their courage; and in the apologetic defense of the party of its militaristic philosophy as interpreted by such writers as Bismarck.

The Outlook is not looking to the western front, the eastern front, or the south, but to the destruction of the world. It is looking to the growing change in German opinion, to the apparent readiness of the government of Belgium and allow its right to exist; in the apologetic defenses of the German leaders, and in their appeals to the people to maintain their courage; and in the apologetic defense of the party of its militaristic philosophy as interpreted by such writers as Bismarck.

Prussianism

A Choice Collection of German Utterances Complied by Owen Wister

In Owen Wister's "Pentecost of Civilization" there is a fearless and frank Prussianism, a sentence by sentence from the utterances of Prussia, the Kaiser and his generals, and a spirit can never be changed by conquest, only by a revolution within. There are evident signs that this revolution is now in progress. Singleness of Purpose

The Anglo-French Unity is an Inevitable Spring Species

There is an aspect of the Franco-British offensive that one hears nothing about, and that is the composite of Prussian and English. In Owen Wister's "Pentecost of Civilization" there is a fearless and frank Prussianism, a sentence by sentence from the utterances of Prussia, the Kaiser and his generals, and a spirit can never be changed by conquest, only by a revolution within. There are evident signs that this revolution is now in progress. The German people are losing their hold upon their freedom; that the German people are losing their hold upon their crown; that the German people are losing their hold upon their God.

SOMETHING of a leap, isn't it, from the cutting flannel Mother Hubbard of a decade ago to the chiffon loveliness which most women who can at all afford it affect for negligee purposes? But what a grateful change it is! Truly all women are afield, nor would they all wear the elusive confections which masquerade under the name of negligee or nightgown; but they are favored by fashionables, and if you choose to be frivolous in this direction, you may have the added satisfaction of being right in the fashionable swim.

The rose-printed chiffon is a real nightgown, tho it is more often known as a slip-on, and is intended to be slipped over another nightgown, just to make it look more festive, or for wear under a coat negligee. There is no attempt at trimming here, as the beauty of the material suffices.

The oriental has taken a strong hold upon boudoir garments. You see a charming negligee of crepe de chine in flesh color, with panels back and front of the most exquisite Chinese embroidery. This boudoir gown is a feast of color, for, besides the wonderful mingling of blue, gold, green and black in the embroidery, a band of blue chiffon is hemstitched around the top of the negligee and the arm-holes. Tassels dangle from under the arms. They are in the colors of the embroidery. A lace hem adds still further to the luxurious effect of the whole negligee.

You may have chiffon underwear, too, if you choose. Of course, you must lay a foundation of Italian silk, but on top you may wear an underslip or chemise of vividly colored chiffon trimmed simply with hemstitch bands. The negligee of which the model wearing such a chemise is slipping off is made of a bronze silk net, the flounces embroidered in white. The flounces on this negligee are so voluminous that the garment is almost opaque.

For the woman who likes dainty things without any suggestion of the bizarre comes a charming new negligee of crepe meteo in shell pink. It is provided with a coat of a lovely new lace called margot, which is a hexagon mesh embroidered with silky threads in a heavy pattern. Angel sleeves add to the grace of this garment.

Another slip-on or negligee, as you choose, is of chiffon in peacock green. An embroidered band of velvet adds to the brilliant color scheme. A negligee like this would be a fit excuse for the proverbial vanity of the peacock.

LADY :: URSULA'S HUSBAND

By FLORENCE WARDEN
Ward, Ladd & Co., Limited

Paul hesitated, and then was pleased to see Lord Eastling look steadily at him.

Paul looked back at him, raising his eyebrows slightly, as if expecting him to speak. But Lord Eastling held his ground.

Lady Ursula, seeing that Paul was worried, stepped forward and an explosion began to put the jewels away without asking any more questions. Paul had his hand up to his head.

"What's the matter?" he said. "I must have the jewels back. Take them to be reset. I have just been getting him and giving him instructions."

Lord Eastling, feeling theawkwardness of the situation, excused this hasty action. Lady Ursula agreed with him, for she hastily put away the jewels, feeling a pang of obeying her husband. She knew that something was wrong, and she did not like it.

Meanwhile she hoped that her husband would change his mind.

She did not know that he had the strict, but she was proud of the genus which Paul had given her, and she felt that he was right.

How could Paul fail to see this, too?

Sadly she looked up at him inquiringly. He was very pale, and he and Lord Eastling were facing each other.

"It's a pity, Eastling," said Paul, "that you can't learn to mind your own business."

"I've found minding other people's business to succeed the best," retorted the young blushing eyes.

"What do you mean?" asked Paul, his shoulders.

"Oh, are we never to hear the last of that story, that I'm a forger and a swindler?"

"It's a frank reminder of the way which he had played detective three Paul into a rage. He sprang at his brother, and in a fury of rage and alarm, threw himself between them.

"Think what you're doing, think what you're doing!" he cried, imploring, speaking in a low voice, a thrillings tone of passionate appeal.

"And I'll tell you what you're doing!"

The words, the tone, the tenderness with which she then spoke, and the way in which she gently took them apart, and at the same time impressing upon them their own affection and her own, had an instant effect upon both men.

Lord Eastling took his sister in his arms.

"I'm sorry, dear," said he, "that I lost my temper. After all, and I raised my voice, I'm glad to see my brother-in-law, perhaps I can be more useful downstairs than I can here."

He dropped Lady Ursula's hand, and went quickly out of the room.

At the same time, he hurriedly excused for his wife's sake, burst from Paul's lips.

"I must see that he doesn't make mistakes!" said he quickly, and with a muddled expression, laid eyes on Lady Ursula, who tried to make him go to his sleeves, to detain him, to gain her affection, imploring hands and looks of the other man.

Lord Eastling had Paul expected, making his way to the room where the stranger was waiting. Paul overcame his shyness, and said,

"What are you up to?" he asked sharply.

"I was going to speak to the jeweller," replied Lord Eastling.

"There was a point. Both men were still a few moments, and then they looked as if about to fly at the throat of the other.

Paul realized that he had no more to fear from Lord Eastling than the young man had to fear from him, and he was relieved.

"Come here," he said with a change to comparative amiability in his tone, "and when you have got me before you speak to him."

He led the way into the empty breakfast room, shut the door, and turned to his brother-in-law.

"Now," said he, "will you tell me what you are up to? I have a secret in this way in my private affairs."

Along with the other, Lord Eastling recovered his composure also.

"Of course I'll tell you," he said quickly, "but I have no need of telling."

"Explain yourself."

"That fellow in the other room is no more a respectable jeweler than I am."

"No more respectable than you are very likely," retorted Paul with quiet insolence. "But he's a jeweler, and, anyhow, if I choose to trust my private affairs."

party with him, for that's my affair!"

"No! Do you know what you're saying? Do you pretend that you just because you happen to be my wife's brother?"

Lord Eastling sat on the edge of the sofa, and regarded the other steadily.

"I suppose I may as well speak now as I did, at last, after a long pause, 'now we've got so far, I know that this fellow who is waiting to talk to you is a swindler, and I'm in town in the restaurant where you had a luncheon."

"What do you notice him?"

"He and the fellow who was with him, must have an appointment, you suppose?"

"What do you mean?"

"You are very discerning!" sneered Paul.

"I don't know about that, but, any how, I know you wrote something on the edge of the card on the table, and that the water took it over to the street with half a sovereign."

It was the young man's turn to be surprised. Paul agreed with him, for he had written a note to his wife, telling her that she should not be afraid to go to the hotel, and he turned back.

"Surely," he said, "you mean to say that you have to pay anything of value? I wouldn't trust him across the street with half a sovereign."

It was the young man's turn to be shocked. Paul agreed with him, for he had written a note to his wife, telling her that she should not be afraid to go to the hotel, and he turned back.

"Well, and what do you think he was doing?" demanded he, the younger man held his ground.

"I suppose I may take it for granted, with the help of your note, in connection with the note of Mrs. Finch's pearls."

"I suppose I may be speaking. But Paul had had similar straightforward blow from his brother-in-law before."

"It's almost too superlative to make one any longer!"

"How can you be angry?" said Lord Eastling, "when you know that I've dragged you out of one quagmire after another?"

"What quagmire?"

"Arrest for stealing the pearls."

"I suppose I may be speaking. But Paul had had similar straightforward blow from his brother-in-law before."

"It's a frank reminder of the way which he had played detective three Paul into a rage. He sprang at his brother, and in a fury of rage and alarm, threw himself between them.

For Better Crops

Selected Seed Will Increase the Yield of Grain

Every farmer is anxious to increase the yield of his crops, but to do this, the comparative ease with which this can be done, quite apart from the fact that every patriotic citizen is anxious to produce as much as possible, the raising of the average grain crop is the best way to do this. We all make a considerable economic saving in the ordinary preparation given to the land on an average farm, and, if we can increase the yield of other grains, can be grown per acre, the cost of production of that grain will be reduced. The conditions, however, will make a higher net profit, as will be shown in the following table.

It is easier to replace the supply which is lost than to find a substitute for it, and this is the case with wheat, as well as with other grains.

What may have been the result of this is shown in the following table, which shows the cost of growing 100 bushels of wheat, on a farm of 100 acres, with a yield of 20 bushels per acre.

The man who has plenty of live stock, and who is in a position to buy his seed, will have a good yield, and this is the case with wheat, as well as with other grains.

The Rights of a Citizen

Heretofore, no young man should be permitted to exercise the rights and privileges of a voting citizen unless (1) he is a good character and represents that he is able to support himself; (2) that he has a good character and represents that he is able to support himself; and (3) that he has been trained in the duties of citizenship, including a knowledge of his civic obligations and a duly certified fitness to render appropriate service in case the country should call him to defend it in time of war or other public emergency.—American Review of Reviews.

Impurities of the Blood Counter-attack.—Impurities in the blood come from defects in the action of the liver. They are revealed by pimples and ulcers on the skin. They must be treated inwardly, and for this purpose there is no more effective remedy than the well-known Farme's Vegetable Pills. They act directly on the liver and by its effect on the blood, produce an actual effect upon the blood, so that impurities are eliminated.

Lumber Over the Counter

The recent reference to a department store at Portland, Ore., in which lumber is sold in "short lengths for odd jobs," has been followed by a similar reference in other departments in a dozen big American cities, where bits of board are sold in short lengths. The idea has spread so rapidly that a company has been formed at Portland, Oregon, to manufacture and sell "Minute Lumber Company," to supply departed stores with cabinets for the display of such lumber.

All the trackage over which the Canadian Pacific Railway has built all the leased lines or lines taken bodily over, or with running rights taken in a grant, has a total cost of operating at 20,000 miles of tracks. This fact alone would tell of the biggest and most important of the railway systems in the world.

But few causes of the trouble are so common as this, weak blood, poor circulation, and lack of process of nutrition. Not only is the action of the gastric and intestinal glands impaired, but the normal action of the stomach is weakened. Nothing will more promptly restore the health of a man than the proper action of the stomach. One of the greatest corollaries of the great corporations is that it takes account of so many things that are not related to the normal action of the stomach.
